Data Protection

When you visit the Dulwich College website, non-personally identifiable data about you is automatically detected and logged by our server. Typically this will include your domain name and country, the page(s) visited, search terms and search engines employed and the web browser used. This information is used by us solely to monitor usage of our website and to find ways of improving it. It is never passed or sold to any third party.

We use an online form to enable interested parties to request a printed prospectus. All personal information submitted in this form is treated in strict confidence, and is processed in accordance with the Data Protection Act and related legislation in force from time to time. Once the prospectus has been despatched the information is deleted from our database.

Photographs of pupils

Permission to use photographs of pupils for the College's publicity purposes, including the website, is sought when they join the College.
